2026 ANNUAL REPORT

40 YEARS. ONE SHARED PURPOSE.

Habitat
for Humanity®
East Bay/Silicon Valley

LETTER FROM THE LEADERSHIP

As Habitat for Humanity East Bay/Silicon Valley celebrates 40 years of service, we're reflecting not only on how far we've come, but on what our community has made possible together.

Forty years ago, a small group of volunteers, donors, and advocates shared a bold belief: that everyone deserves a safe, stable, and affordable place to call home. What began as a grassroots effort has grown into a movement that has helped thousands of families build brighter futures across the East Bay and Silicon Valley.

The impact of that work can be measured in many ways. In the homes built, repaired, and preserved. In the volunteers who have dedicated more than two million hours to our mission. In the thousands of families who have gained stability, financial strength, and new opportunities through affordable housing.

But the true measure of our impact is what happens next.

It's the child who grows up with a quiet place to study and becomes the first in their family to graduate from college. It's the homeowner who can finally save for retirement instead of worrying about next month's rent. It's the family that puts down roots, builds wealth, and creates opportunities that will last for generations.

These stories remind us that housing is more than shelter. It is a foundation for health, education, economic mobility, and stronger communities.

As we celebrate this milestone year, we do so with tremendous gratitude for the people who have helped make this work possible. Habitat's success has always been powered by a community of supporters who choose to invest their time, resources, expertise, and belief in a better future.

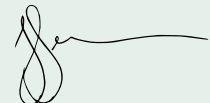

THE PROGRESS OF THE LAST 40 YEARS BELONGS TO ALL OF US, AND THE WORK OF THE NEXT 40 YEARS BEGINS TODAY.

And while we are proud of what we have accomplished together, our focus remains firmly on what is still to come.

The need for affordable housing remains urgent, but so does the opportunity. Every home built, every family served, and every partnership formed demonstrate what is possible when a community comes together around a shared vision.

The future we envision is one where more families have access to the opportunities that stable housing creates. More neighborhoods thrive. More children can imagine bigger futures for themselves. And more people recognize that solving our housing challenges is not only necessary—it is possible.

Thank you for being part of this journey. The progress of the last 40 years belongs to all of us, and the work of the next 40 years begins today.

FOR 40 YEARS, WE'VE BEEN BUILDING SOMETHING BIGGER THAN HOMES

What began with a handful of community members has been strengthened and sustained by thousands more. These next few pages celebrate what we've achieved together—the impact we've created, and the milestones we've reached over our 40-year history.

BREAKING NEW GROUND 1986-2000

Three local Habitat affiliates—Bay & Valley Habitat, East Bay Habitat, and Mt. Diablo Habitat—galvanized around the bold belief that affordable homeownership could be built through community partnership. This laid the groundwork for the impact that continues today.

BUILT TOGETHER

A Habitat home doesn't get built alone.

It's built by people who keep saying yes. Showing up with their time, their talents, their voices, their generosity, and their belief that everyone deserves a safe place to call home.

Together, those individual acts become something extraordinary.

The people on the following pages remind us that Habitat isn't built by one organization. It's built by a community.

Johnnie

DONOR & BOARD MEMBER

"If we can make it so that people don't need us—or need us less—I think that's a good goal to shoot for. Until then, I'll do my best for Habitat."

For 25 years, Johnnie has supported Habitat as a donor, volunteer, and Board member. From helping build homes in Malawi to meeting President Carter, he's seen firsthand how safe, affordable housing can transform lives and strengthen communities.

"Safe, decent housing is a basic human right. I've invested in Habitat spiritually and financially. The more people I meet and the more impact we have, the more motivated I become."

Elaine

HABITAT HOMEOWNER

Fifteen years after becoming a Habitat homeowner, Elaine is helping other families build futures of their own.

She and her husband, Steve, raised five children in the Morgan Hill home they helped build alongside Habitat volunteers—a place Elaine calls "a harbor... that kept them safe and gave them a place from which to launch."

Now, whether she's volunteering on a build site, speaking at fundraisers, or advocating for affordable housing, Elaine is working to create thousands more harbors for families like hers.

"I want to hear thousands upon thousands of stories that sound like my family's."

Katy

CORPORATE PARTNER &
BOARD MEMBER

Katy first partnered with Habitat through Wells Fargo's Philanthropy and Community Impact team. After volunteering on build sites and watching families receive the keys to their new homes at home celebrations, she chose to deepen her commitment by joining Habitat's Board of Directors.

"It's not just about building houses—it's about building stability, belonging, and long-term opportunity. It's one of the few ways to give back where you can immediately see your impact and know it will last for generations."

Akhilulu

FUTURE HOMEOWNER

Akhilulu couldn't come to terms with uprooting his family to chase affordability, like so many friends had. With a career he loved, family nearby, and deep roots in the Bay Area, leaving California was never the future he wanted.

Now, he won't have to.

These days, Akhlilu spends his Saturdays helping build his future neighborhood at Sequoia Grove. His wife is counting down the days until they move in, his son is planning his new bedroom, and his daughter already loves the park across the street.

Soon, he'll welcome friends and family into their new home for a long-awaited housewarming.

"We can settle down in one area. We can really contribute to the community. We can make a difference."

Bob & Barbara

DONORS & VOLUNTEERS

For nearly half of our history, Bob and Barbara have motivated others to join the Habitat movement with them.

It started with a dare that got Bob onto a bicycle, riding cross-country for Habitat while Barbara drove the support vehicle. Together, they turned that ride into decades of awareness, generosity, and community.

Along the way, they inspired generosity from large online gifts to the $5.47—mostly in change—that Bob received from a weary laborer who emptied his pockets in New Mexico after learning what Bob was riding for.

What was the ride for? "It's stability, educational opportunities, building equity—all of which can change generations," Bob says.

In the years since, he and Barbara have seen that play out, again and again. In the little boy, excited to show off his future room on a construction site. The mother introducing her daughter, a college student, to show what homeownership through Habitat had made possible.

"You just do what you can, where you are, with the resources you have," Barbara says. "That's Habitat."

Becky

VOLUNTEER & DONOR

For more than 15 years, Becky has shown up wherever Habitat has needed her—contributing nearly 2,000 volunteer hours on more than 60 homes across the Bay Area and during international builds in El Salvador, Cambodia, and Malawi.

Over the years, Habitat has become more than a place to volunteer—it has “embedded itself” in her community and become part of who she is.

One memory stands above the rest: watching a future homeowner climb a staircase she’d just helped complete.

“Watching him stand at the top of those stairs, looking down at his home, his pride and emotion were so clear. It made that hot, sunny day fully worthwhile.”

When Becky recently purchased her own home, she experienced that same pride herself.

“I didn’t realize the level of pride and sense of security I would feel so quickly after becoming a homeowner. It gave me a deeper understanding of what we’re helping Habitat homeowners accomplish.”

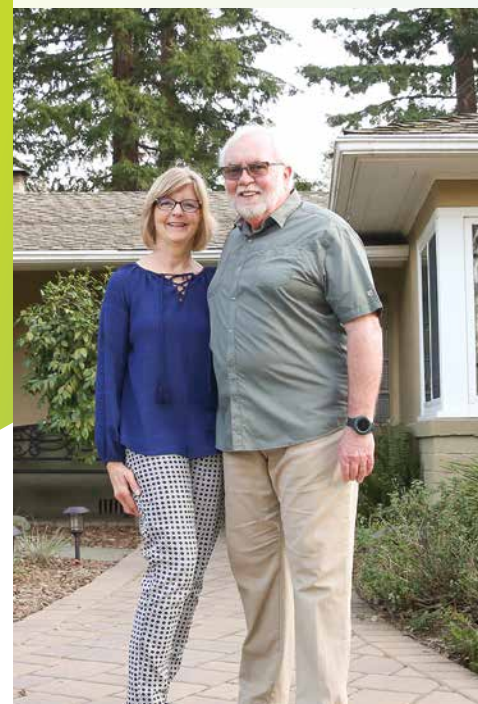

Randi & Lou

DONORS & VOLUNTEERS

Whether it’s their backgrounds in mental health and finance, or their Midwestern childhoods instilled with the value of generosity, Randi and Lou have always found meaning in Habitat’s mission.

“Homeownership is the key to everything in terms of your future,” Randi says.

As donors, volunteers, and legacy supporters, they’ve dedicated time and resources to expanding access to that goal. “We just want to give back,” Lou says, “and know that we can continue to do good.”

Elaine

DONOR

Supporting Habitat is a long held tradition in Elaine’s family.

Inspired by parents who volunteered and gave generously, she made her first gift to Habitat after they asked for charitable donations in lieu of Christmas presents. That gift helped her hometown Habitat affiliate purchase five acres of land the following year.

Though she now calls the Bay Area home, Elaine’s commitment to Habitat has followed her across the country.

“The structures are different, but the human needs are similar—the chance for security, stability, and to experience the sweetness of life.”

Juliana

HABITAT HOMEOWNER

When we were working our volunteer hours, we were not even tired—we were happy because it was for our children's happiness.

Chris

WOMEN'S CREW &
RESTORE VOLUNTEER

My favorite memories revolve around the friendships I have formed over the 18 years of volunteering at Habitat for Humanity. It's all about making a difference, but it sure does take a village to build a home, doesn't it?

Dean

RESTORE & SITE VOLUNTEER

Home is a place of refuge where I can comfortably lay my head at night, surrounded by those I love. Having a safe place to be fulfills a basic human need.

Rick

RESTORE
VOLUNTEER

I feel like I fit in, in terms of what I can contribute. I like the mission, and I like what I do.

Dave

FORMER STAFF

I have such fond memories of my Habitat days, stretching back to 1993 when I was a volunteer contractor for my first Build-A-Thon on 105th in Oakland. The positive energy was palpable and infectious, and I was hooked.

Amna

HABITAT HOMEOWNER

Becoming a homeowner was just as if you're breathing fresh air, like pure oxygen. It felt different from the air we normally breathe in. Cooler, pure, fresher than what we breathe every day. That's what I felt.

Nerida

HABITAT HOMEOWNER

I just want people to know how grateful I am, and how important support was to make my family's dreams come true. They are making a big difference in the lives of the people in these houses. They change kids' futures. I always keep them in my heart. As homeowners, we can focus on what's important, on making sure our kids have what they need to be successful.

Toya

HABITAT HOMEOWNER

I have such a sense of pride in ownership. Growing up, I always wanted this, to own a house and have stability, and dig down into where I live.

Christin

FORMER STAFF & AMERICORPS

Habitat is FAMILY. Habitat was my chosen family, the family of AmeriCorps, the families I met and worked with who became part of my family. There are Habitat homes that I worked on in almost every city I visit in the Bay Area, so it's amazing to see the scale of that impact.

Paul

FORMER STAFF

Home is backstage to the theater of life. It is where you are safe, have privacy, and can be yourself. It is where you prepare to perform in the world. My favorite memories are seeing that a building of concrete, wood, and drywall turns into a home for a family.

Ted

PLAYHOUSE VOLUNTEER

My motivation comes from my belief that everybody should do one good deed, one kind or compassionate act, per day. If you can do that, then it goes back to the old saying that there's not enough darkness in the world to extinguish the light of a single candle.

Bill & Annie

DONORS & VOLUNTEERS

For Bill and Annie, supporting Habitat has become a lifelong commitment—one that has taken them from construction sites across the Bay Area to Habitat communities around the world.

Whether Bill is building homes or Annie is helping homeowners share their stories through translation, they have contributed thousands of volunteer hours while investing philanthropically in Habitat's mission.

Bill says, "A home is where families share their lives, create memories, and build their future together."

Allan

VOLUNTEER

Retirement might have been the end of a career for Allan, but it was the beginning of a new community.

Over the past 21 years, he's contributed nearly 4,000 volunteer hours building Habitat homes across Silicon Valley, sharing his skills with fellow volunteers, and building lasting friendships with the homeowners beside him—many of whom he still visits today.

"Habitat has let me put my hands-on skills to good use for the benefit of someone else. It gave me the camaraderie I missed from my working life."

Judy

CORPORATE PARTNER

"When you know that you have something that's yours, you can just breathe."

For Judy, Habitat's work has always been personal.

Through her role leading Community Relations at PG&E, she's partnered with Habitat for years—from construction sites and Playhouse builds to supporting the organization's mission through corporate philanthropy. But her passion began much earlier.

Judy remembers her family returning to their native Suriname for several years so they could save enough to buy a three-bedroom home in Brooklyn—a home that remains in her family today.

"Home is really, really special to me," she says. "I want people to have what we had, knowing that it's your own space, and that you can do whatever you want with it."

Guillermo

HABITAT HOMEOWNER

“As renters we lived month to month. As homeowners we think in generations.”

For Guillermo and his partner, Yulisa, affordable homeownership transformed everyday life in ways both big and small.

An affordable mortgage means they can finally plan beyond the next month, save for the future, and enjoy more time together as a family. Their home is thoughtfully designed around the special needs of their son, Cesar, giving him the space and independence to thrive. They’ve planted garden beds, baked bread, and built friendships with neighbors—simple moments that now feel possible because home is no longer a source of uncertainty.

But Guillermo’s story didn’t end when his family received the keys.

Drawing on his background in community organizing, he now advocates for policies that will help more families achieve affordable homeownership. He speaks, writes, and builds relationships in support of Habitat’s legislative priorities because he wants others to experience the same opportunity.

“Affordable homeownership is not charity. It is smart public policy,” Guillermo wrote in a recent editorial. “Home should not be a dream you rent. It should be a future you own.”

HOME
A DREAM
YOU RENT.
IT SHOULD BE A FUTURE
YOU OWN.

HABITAT FOR HUMANITY EAST BAY/SILICON VALLEY has worked with the communities of Alameda, Contra Costa, and Santa Clara counties since 1986, advancing affordability and opportunity through housing. With the partnership of volunteers, supporters, advocates, and clients, we build, preserve, and prepare people for homeownership—and the transformative potential that comes with it.

Access to homeownership is a critical driver of improved economic, health, educational, social, and generational outcomes. Habitat's model runs on community generosity, government investment, and client partnership to build a world where everyone has a decent place to live.
